IND8000Independent Study*Variable credits

Course Description: During this independent study, students will work closely with a faculty mentor to design and execute a comprehensive research project or literature review in a specialized area of interest. The primary objective of this course is to foster intellectual independence and cultivate a deeper understanding of complex scientific concepts and methodologies. The student shall contact the faculty mentor and program associate dean directly to obtain permission to register for the course and determine the appropriate number of credit hours. The student should contact the faculty mentor directly for arrangement of hours, and meeting time and place. If permission from both the faculty mentor and program associate dean to add this course is not obtained and granted, the enrollment may be administratively dropped.
